

Thermodynamics in Quantum Systems

Paul Bracken

University of Texas RGV

The thermodynamics of very small systems has been of interest lately. Here we try to give an introduction to some ideas in this area. We discuss nonequilibrium processes in quantum systems together with some developments such as the Jarzynski inequality and its connection to the second law of thermodynamics.