Dynamic correlation in multireference problems

Garnet Kin-Lic Chan

Department of Chemistry, Princeton University, Princeton NJ 08544

While substantial advances have been made in the description of strong correlation in large active spaces, the efficient description of the remaining dynamic correlation has become a serious bottleneck. I will describe a number of approaches that we have recently developed to tackle the problem, and illustrate them with some sample applications on transition metal complexes.